Module 6: Intercultural Communication for Business (Managerial Communication) James S. O'Rourke, Elizabeth A. Tuleja
This module examines International Communication for Business, looking both broadly and specifically at issues and opportunities that will seem increasingly important as the business world shrinks and grows more interdependent. As time zones blur and fewer restrictions are imposed on the global movement of capital, raw materials, finished goods, and human labor, people will cling fiercely to the ways in which they were enculturated as youngsters. Culture will become a defining characteristic, not only of peoples and nations,but of organizations and industries.
