Tears of the Linear Animals J Berkman
Helen Fontenot is a fortune teller; a real one. Her gift works by allowing her to merge with a non-linear reality where the future, present, and past can be seen as one. But the gift comes with a heavy price. Tapping into this hidden reality has bound to her to an animal essence that exists across all living things. And even though she has learned to control the animal, when released, it is a powerful force that acts more from instinct than reason. The gift was inherited by her daughter and grandchildren, and the power of the animal, until it is brought under control, is more a curse than a gift. The animal has killed people, including Helen's husband and daughter. Helen and her grandchildren live with guilt because of what they have done and might still do. But something is about to happen outside the small rural town of Mamolouses, something that even Helen could not foresee. That something may a last bring closure to the gift-curse that has haunted Helen and her grandchildren for most of their lives.
