Dogs, babies and unwelcome white knights...

After years spent managing other people's lives, exhausted rodeo-star-turned-sports-agent Eric Anders returns to Marietta, Montana to try living his own life. But when his pretty Australian shepherd falls in love with the mangy mutt next door, and the too-young, too-mouthy sundress and boots wearing single mother trots over to accuse him of stealing her dog, Eric's life veers suddenly out of control.

Leda's too busy to chase after a wandering dog. Nor does she need advice from the handsome stranger lounging about her neighbor's place like he owns it. Eric's hot gaze makes her weak in the knees but her track record with men is as bad as it is short. Sparks like that only leave you burned. She's got her precious baby girl to protect and that's plenty.

But Eric can't stand injustice and if anyone needed someone on her side, it's Leda. But it's tough to be a white knight when the damsel in distress keeps kicking you to the curb. He could change her life, if only she'd quit being so stubborn.

Will this cowboy in shining armor win Leda's love?
