Freshman Academy - Unconventional Classroom: Bridging the Gap Between Middle School and High School Brent Bogan, Matthew Ogles
A successful Freshman Academy can be one of the most effective ways to transition students from a middle school setting to the high school setting. Freshman Academies have proven to curb inappropriate behavior, allow students to emotionally adjust to the new environment of high school, and improve overall academic achievement. Brent Bogan has played a key role in the successful development of a Freshman Academy and Matthew Ogles brings his experience of teaching seventh and eighth grade students to determine certain needs that seek attention when entering high school.
